Hey Cyclists, The summer Track season is over, Cyclocross is in full swing, and Road base training is ramping up. Keep your eyes on the email list and calendar, since just because the weather is getting cold does not mean there aren't still dozens of intense (crazy) riders out!

For a brief summary of track nationals from Zach LaBry (9/17):

The four of us -- Mike Garrett, Chris Birch, Zach Hartwig and myself -- are heading back to Cambridge tomorrow, bringing back silver medals

in for the 2011 Collegiate Track
National Team Omnium! The odds were certainly stacked against our small team of four, but a lot of strong riding from all four riders kept us in a neck-and-neck with the US Military Academy (also known as Westpoint) throughout the weekend.

Among some of the weekend's most impressive results were 5th place in the men's team pursuit, 15th place in the men's points race for

Mike Garrett, and 15th place in the women's points race for Chris Birch (a race for which she only became eligible after receiving her upgrade by phone the day before).

I would like to make a special thank you to Jeff Palter and Kurt Begemann from the Northeast Velodrome, not only for being supportive of our team during the summer season, but also for opening the track to us for practice and lending us their aero equipment for the weekend. We'll be headed back up there for more track racing in the spring.

Cyclocross is going strong, racing almost every weekend; see the ECCC race calendar here (and check your emails for some exciting race reports from Boss of Cross Christina Birch)

The road team (and any others who are interested) are headed out to Borrego Springs, CA in late January for their annual pre-season training camp. The official race calendar has been posted, and there are 9 race weekends to look forward to this season!

Keep riding and don't freeze to death ;)
